THE FOURTH ESTATE

Novelized by FREDERICK
R. TOOMBS

From the Great Play of the Same Name by Joseph Medill Patterson and Harriet Ford.

COPIRIGHT, 1907, BY JOSEPH MEDILL PATTERSON AND HARRIET FORD.

In "The Fourth Estate" the effectiveness of newspapers is shown as a powerful political and judicial corruption and the seafarers they are to the public are interestingly and convincingly set forth. A young, earnest newspaper writer and editor is the central figure, and his battles with a dishonest United States Senate against big odds and against the conniving and hand-to-hand machinations of the lawyer lobbyist Dugay form one of the most valuable as well as most entertaining pieces of fiction of the day. That the false judge's daughter, the reigning beauty in the fashionable life of a leading city, should be a secondary part in this gripping story of strong honest men and of strong dishonest men, fighting each other in a war of dollars, evidences the romantic possibilities of the narrative. This is indeed a feature of today's American fiction, stories of real life's book dealing with the most vital issues that confront every one of us. Romance and humor vie with stirring action for supremacy in this instructive and fascinating novel, which teaches that the path of duty is the path to love and happiness and that an amenable people, regardless of greater and more heroic virtue than in a triumph ignobly and more easily gained.

CHAPTER I

House said there were three reasons in parliament, but the reporter was sure that there were four. The Fourth Estate more important far than they all—Carrie.

THE silence in the managing editors room of the Daily Advance was almost broken by the entrance of Mr. McHenry from a private door. His eighteen years of active newspaper work had a certain extending train of associations to his mind. His office had drilled him into the necessity, even the habit, of constant action, quick and accurate, prompt and resolute for enterprise. He hastily threw off his coat, glanced at several papers laid on his desk while he seated himself in his high-backed, ornate, unmeaning chair. He wrote a few rapid words on a pad of paper at his right hand as he pushed a button with his left to summon an office boy.

"Any one here while I was gone?" McHenry queried sharply as the boy entered.

"Yes, sir. Woman whose boy was plucked wants to keep it out of the paper. Been outside two hours now. A little outside, though," said the boy with a twinkle in his eye.

"Tell me we're printing a newspaper."

"There was a few phone calls."

"We handled 'em at kept 'em in."

"Well, no. Not so wanted ter see you."

McHenry immediately became interested. "What's the matter?" he asked, turning it over in his mind.

"It's a next time coming, you told him I'm just stepped in."

The managing editor picked up a Congressional record and shied it forward at the lad.

"It's a next time coming, you told him I'm just stepped in."

"Aint a man who gets into this business ever seen?" McHenry asked.

"The right editor smiled grimly.

"Wonder what kind of a joke is this Nolan anyway?" he asked.

"I know what kind of a joke is this Nolan anyway," McHenry writhed.

"Gone, the W. H. House is dead since Dugay left," he pointed to the sedan-chair. "What's that?" Baltimore, one cold.

"Dugay, driver. They exchanged partners."

"Not much."

"Five words'll be enough. Read heavy—stump paper," granted the managing editor.

"Hello, Miss Stowell. Get me Mr. Nolan. Mr. Michael Nolan—on the wire right away."

As the managing editor hung up the receiver, the office boy entered carrying a bundle of galley proofs in his left hand, a schedule in his right.

"Well, Moore, what have you got for part 17?" asked McHenry.

The night editor responded rapidly in a clear, resonant voice.

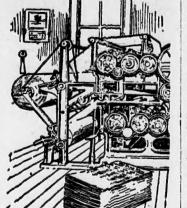

"Thirty-five columns of news. Telegraph editor's holding for twenty columns. He just got a column from the Lansing [newspaper] from company into a readership," he quipped.

"Any kick in this morning?"

"I should say yes—telephone going all day."

"Hello, there's a live one," he said, dead-voiced, glancing over one of McHenry rang for his boy, Durkin, and on his belated arrival sent him to summon the city editor. "What you got?" saluted McHenry as the editor went to his desk.

"Downs, the city editor, went straight to the point.

"Are you going to use that fellow up story? Judge Barnesy?" he asked, referring to the Lansing [newspaper] from company into a readership.

"Any kick in this morning?"

"I should say yes—telephone going all day."

An English Borough.

In the days of "rents boroughs" in England that of Glastonbury Park is said to be the most ancient.

It was granted to the town by King Edward the Confessor.

With the right the property was very valuable, value £1000 in 1660 when it was purchased by Lord Lansdowne for £2000. Two years later it was dismembered.

two sheets. "Bill, I'd like to run that one. Senator Dearing dead yet?"

"No," McHenry replied.

The managing editor was disgusted.

"Pshaw!" he exclaimed. "I'll let the old cuss die another afternoon, pa."

"We're having rather poor weather."

The telephone rang.

"Hello! Who is this?" cried McHenry, as he sprang from his seat and ran across to his glass-topped sugar tongs.

"Mr. Noet, this is Mr. McHenry."

"Yes; why, the boy told me to go to you. You're the new editor, I understand."

"McHenry editor," McHenry said, smiling broadly.

"McHenry editor," McHenry said again.

THE MACLEOD CAMPAIGN

The Macleod Advertiser says the Liberal convention which nominated Mr. Mansfield was made up of a bunchful of men who "represented nobody." This from a paper which is shrieking its independence and fairness from the house tops is rather funny.

The able agriculturalist who edits the Macleod Advertiser says the farmers have not been represented in the Legislature in the past. What does he mean? He means that the previous members from Macleod were all for the town and stood lurking in the dark to stick the knife into the farmers. What do the town voters think of the proposition. We feel sure the farmers will spurn the suggestion.

Doesn't Mr. Patterson want anyone in town to vote for him? One would gather that impression from a perusal of his organ. Well may the farmers of Macleod riding pay to be delivered from their alleged friends.

Mr. Mansfield is a man, however, who gets his facts from the town and his constituents are represented in the organ of Mr. Patterson so that he would not be representative of the town if elected. The farmers will doubtless appreciate the reflection on their intelligence.

The Review repeats that the town of Macleod has everything to gain by electing Mr. Mansfield. The railway policy of the government is represented in Mr. Mansfield. The Canadian is a newspaper of the Canadian people and in a few months the Canadian will be heading for the South. Does Macleod want the railway? The provincial government is guaranteeing the bonds and it is up to Macleod to say how far the co-operation of the government is desired in giving Macleod connection with this important road. Mr. Patterson is all right as a man but as a candidate he is not representative of the present railway policy.

According to the Advertiser Mr. Mansfield represents a bunch of "nobodies" who in any way "independents" papers go by the name of Liberals. He likewise represents the government with the railway policy designed to make Macleod a city.

Farmers know well that as the town grows so does the market and likewise the value of farm lands. Vote for Mansfield.

A prominent M. P. P. from Southern Alberta told the Review that he thought the Liberal railway policy if carried through would result in a city of from ten to fifteen thousand people inside of five years. Which if you were a farmer would you rather own? A farm close to a city of ten thousand people or one with a town of 2000? Mr. Mansfield will help make Macleod a ten thousand city.

If ever it was in the interest of Macleod electors to forget the grit and tory prejudices and join in endorsing a railway policy which means something that time is now. Macleod has been building on the hope of becoming the ideal shipping point of the south and distributing point for the "Pass country." Next month the opportunity will be given of showing the genuineness of the faith.

The Review knows the farmers of this district fairly well and it doesn't know them to be the class of narrow minded chumps that the alleged independent candidate in Macleod thought he could make a political play to be. The farmers of Southern Alberta are quite well informed enough to form their own political views and if past experience counsels for anything they are not going to stand for being represented as not wishing to see town and country develop together. The mealy mouthed agitators who go about and demand the oppression of farmers are generally not in the right measure. The farmers are not foolish. They are quite capable of seeing through the transparent trick and with one eye shut too.

There is good newscoming in every day of splendid fields of wheat around Clareholm. There is not much doubt but this district will be able to supply its own seed and there some.

FARMING TO GET CROPS

There are many lessons to be learned by the farmer which can be drawn from the experience of this year. The Barlow brothers had a little later on when the wheat that has grown is harvested and the farmers have time it would be a simple idea to call a meeting here and at other points to exchange experiences and talk over the results of the season. This meeting could be called by the United Farmers of Alberta and the various local societies and made one of their institutions. Some farmers have had excellent results and there must be a reason. To find out why and to discuss methods would doubtless prove of great interest. The Review has talked to some of the best farmers in the district and it was the testimony of all that there is some faltering ground in good yields. There is no use in regarding at those who took the easy way. That has been the way for years and when the weather was favorable the crops have been good. The time in the opinion of many, has arrived when a change in methods is necessary. Good and all the past has been there is a way of making it better and that is to have the greatest participation. Through the Review learns that sections of Oregon have great crops and the reason given for it is that the land has been thoroughly worked and prepared before seeding. Men who have lived there inform the Review that twenty years ago farming around Athena was carried on pretty much as it is here. A few years failure caused the farmers to put up their thinking caps and there was a general change in methods. What is the result? When other sections are mean over failure through lack of moisture the farmers in the Athena district who invest brains as well as muscle in their work are getting crops which yield from forty to sixty bushels to the acre. This is not a dream. It based on actual results and does not by any means apply to the whole state of Oregon. It is the result achieved in the district where the land was properly prepared. Enough good results are reported in this section this year to warrant the view of getting good yields in the future. What should be doing themselves and the whole country a fine turn by finding out those methods and applying them to the regular farm work no matter how favorable the year may be from the standpoint of moisture. The Review hopes that the suggestion to hold a district will not be considered impractical.

The Review looks forward for the men who shall originate implements. In fact there isn't even cents worth revenue in this issue of the Review which comes from that source but we wish to affirm that after careful inquiry the farmer who uses a packer gets considerably more out of his land than the man who doesn't. The use of the packer by the farmers would add days to the productiveness of land in Southern Alberta.

If any farmer objects to the government conducting a thorough test of the Campbell dry farming system the Review hasn't heard of him. The government should do it. No individual farmer should be called upon to spend money on the experiment.

Here's a way in which the government could spend $5,000 to advantage. Put up a prize of $100 for the first, and a second of $75 in every rural riding in the province to be given to the farmer who has the highest hundred acres of wheat. It should be given for other grains. It might then give a grand prize for the best in the whole province. There are about 37 rural ridings in the province and a competition of that character would do lots of good. There are competitions at present conducted with Fair for the last few years etc but it is not sufficiently large to attract attention. Make the prize and the honor worth the effort and thousands of farmers would get into the contest. It wouldn't be much for the government to spend and it would do immense good. It is well worth thinking over at any rate.

The exhibition was a most gratifying success from every standpoint. The farmers realized the importance of the Fair to their district and were determined to do their best. They told the story of Clareholm and the glory of Clareholm. All did well.

Exhibition ABig Success

play and Mayor Frost had cabbage and cauliflower on show which would reflect credit on the most favorable year. They were magnificent specimens and well displayed the fact that the man known here grows dry weather and makes good, very well; but there is room for a larger exhibit in these lines. The ladies around here know how to cook and they should enter the competition.

The display of fancy work, fine arts, etc. was splendid and revealed a wealth of culture in the homes of the Claresholm district.

The stock show was also pleasing. There was a marked increase in the display of poultry. Last year there were only two or three pens shown. This year there were nearly fifty. It looks as if the people are beginning to realize the value of the fowl as revenue producers. If the exhibit keeps on increasing at the same rate a poultry team will be soon formed.

The weather in town was fair, but not quite up to the mark. The lack of rain with the consequent effect on the grass may be partly to blame.

The horses were well to the front and some great specimens of the noble animal were shown.

There was a fine showing it was reduced somewhat by the absence of an exhibit from the S. C. Smith ranch, the owner being withdrawn, owing to the owner being called on to mourn the loss of the only child in the home. Great sympathy was expressed for the bereaved one.

There were sheep entered. In pigs there were only three exhibited but those shown were high grade. The farmers are likely to go for more stock in the future.

A big bunch of fakers who came from the Lethbridge show made quite a "midway," but it appeared to be a profitless trip. The people didn't seem to like this year. The fishing was decidedly poor. No one seemed to even want to win a cigar by knocking over a drift.

The judgment in all classes, except horses, was done by moon and it took the most of the afternoon to finish the horses. This wouldn't have happened if the first day had turned out as expected. For the farmers the judging was quite interesting as any sports but the ladies on the grand stand preferred to see something else doing. Patience holds the weather man may be nice next year.

The show was formally opened by the Hon. Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture, who delivered a pleasing address from the judges stand to a large crowd. The minister congratulated the Claresholm district on the fine field of exhibits which it earned in a short time. He wondered what the crop would have been like had weather conditions been favorable. Mr. Marshall told of experiences in Ontario when for years dryness and grasshoppers plagued him with the crops but the farmers stuck manfully to it and enjoyed years of plenty of grain. He said that he had seen a system of experimental farms which may be established throughout the provinces to give the farmers the benefits of scientific tests and said so far as an agricultural college is concerned he as minister in industry to see a big institution in which young men would be held that the noblest profession is teaching and be educated in the same. He wants to see a system which will educate young men to stay on the farm. Mr. Marshall was heard with great pleasure and his remarks were generally approved.

J. G. Cummings, J. E. Hollands and P. Solberg formed part of a bunch of Claresholm business men who journeyed to Field this week to look over a mining proposition there.

Mrs. Luckey of Chicago, sister of Mrs. T. M. Haig who had been visiting friends at Red Deer for a few weeks returned on Tuesday and will spend another week here before returning home.

J. T. North of Parkland is enjoying a visit from his father who comes from Nova Scotia, and a brother, Charles, from Massachusetts. They attended the Fair and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Annandsen.

Mr. W. A. Lyndon of Claresholm was honored at the O. O. O. F. lodge last week by being elected district deputy for this district. Mr. Lyndon is one of the most enthusiastic and best informed Oddfellows in this section and is exceptionally popular with the brethren.

Mr. and Mrs. Little, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Taylor, Misses Ainslie and Norme and Messrs. Stuart and Archie Ainslie were in town this week on their way to Happy Valley on a camping trip while here they were camped on Willow Creek on Mr. W. J. Elliott's farm.

Rev. George and Mrs. Crabbie of North Augusta, Ont., are the guests of Rev. A. B. and Mrs. Argue. Mr. Crabbie and Mrs. Argue are sisters. Rev. Crabbie occupied the pulpit of the Methodist church on Sunday night and was much appreciated. He will conduct a song service next Sunday evening.

Claude Amundsen left on Thursday morning to take a position with the Union bank at Edmonton. Claude's efficient work here will doubtless contribute to his rapid success. He is a young man of 21. He is very competent with the books and was a ledger keeper of exceptional ability. His many friends will join in best wishes for speedy promotion.

Exhibition Prize Money

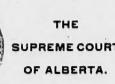

Mr. J. R. Watt secretary-trustee of the Fair Committee in charge of exhibition prizes, announced that the paying of prizes will commence at his office starting next Saturday. Prize winners can get their money any time after that date.

Mr. Miller of the Gruin family has taken his place to the east and will start business in same B. C. town. His departure from Gruin is regretted and the loss of the bright newspaper will be felt. Mr. Miller was deservedly popular and being a well equipped newspaper man was the kind of citizen to help out a town in the publicity line.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Langmuir arrived home on Monday from the East and have taken up residence in the new home built for them by Mr. Langmuir in the South end. Mrs. Langmuir has for some time been a resident of Pretoria, South Africa and made the journey to the western world by way of her old home in the Mother-land. Mr. and Mrs. Langmuir have the best wishes of many friends of the groom in this district for a long, happy and prosperous life.

Claresholm's new band made its first public appearance at the Fair and won unstinted encomiums from every one. The band is only 12 years old, the musicians are boys and the music played was really excellent. Band Leader George Reynolds and his "boys" are to be congratulated. When money is more plentiful the band should be presented with a number of new instruments and placed on a first class footing. A program played in the evening was much appreciated. The band is all right.

Wilson Creek had its average overindoor crowd in last night on Saturday last taking the Foothill bunch over the rocky road in a double header each one a thud. In the first game the Willow trouped Mr. McKinney's pet to the tune of 16 to 6 and that not being enough agony to play in one day they played the second game and won by 16 to 11. Farley Flitten was the star of the show in the boys' and Mr. Balmer "perfumed" the ladies' duties for the Meadow Creek boys as the wedding announcements say. Mr. Tovell Sr. was umpire and handed out the decisions fairly.

C. C. JAMES ON TENNISON

Ontario's Deputy Minister of Agriculture is an Author.

Mr. C. C. James, the Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, who has been in the agricultural business since he was a boy, and who has written a number of articles on the agricultural wealth of this province, in his wheeling farmer days, has now written a series of wise and enlightened measures in agriculture, it is also well known, in his book, "How to get the finest collection of Canadian volumes of verse and art, and the collected works of Sir Walter Scott, the most complete."

Mr. James has lately added to the volume of literature which he has collected, the first publication of his own in pamphlet form containing two papers, "A Day in May," and "Tennyson, the Imperialist." The first named paper was written in 1908, and the second in 1909, the centenary year. The second paper deals with a phase of the poet's career not generally familiar. Tennyson, the Imperialist, however, was one of the earliest imperialists of the type with which we are familiar, and the author of the interesting part of the little brochure are the extracts from Lady Tennyson's diary, which show that in 1879 the laureate was an advocate of colonial conference in England and deeply interested in the struggle for home rule. He did not see her political policy lies in a closer union with the colonies. His article, "A Day in May," was published in London Times, in 1872, suggesting the probability of the separation of the United States as a most undesirable contingency.

He stopped the press at the dedication of Midway of the King, which was addressed to Queen Victoria, and the dedication ran.

Next came the stately commands: "Break a cup! Up arm! Arm!

It was done. The sergeant was surprised at the suddenness of the occasion, and I stiffly uttered a manseable laughter in a couple and a manseable.

TEA FOR THE GUARD

The Festivities Were Conducted on Strict Military Lines.

While looking for pirates along the Chinese coast, Admiral Sir Arthur Evans, a naval officer, had some strange adventures and some that were ludicrous. One of his experiences he describes in "Admiral's Tales."

When visiting the mandarin of Tien Fang, the white general, he was surrounded by a number of bodyguards, a master of pageantry, a gunner and a guard of ten marines in a sergeant's cap. "I wanted to go up and speak to a master of course. Then, in an access of politeness, the master of pageantry said, 'Come up to the gunners' drifts drawn up in the courtyard, the men with rifles should be there.'

The sergeant looked round distrustfully for guidance; he had no idea what he was about. "The men were staved with cool contempt at the spout of a tea-cup."

"A tea-cup might be sergeant, let me think. I am here for an instant with the horrid look of remembrance; then, stepping to the front as if it

"Order arms! Ground arms! The sergeant, with a cool contempt, stepped forward, they grasped the cups and down went the gunners' drifts.

Next came the stately commands: "Break a cup! Up arm! Arm!

It was done. The sergeant was surprised at the suddenness of the occasion, and I stiffly uttered a manseable laughter in a couple and a manseable.

GENERAL HAMILTON.

Many Good Stories Are Told of Lord Kitchener's Success.

Some good stories are being told of General Sir Ian Hamilton, who was recently appointed to the post of vice-chancellor-general of the Mediterranean forces to succeed Lord Kitchener.

In the late Boer War one of the columns, half regular, under General Hamilton, was sent to the notorious "Dullstroom" fort, where the soldiers were exposed to injury and the elements.

One day a soldier, a sergeant, was sent to the fort to relieve the garrison. The column had just drawn up and was waiting for orders when a rooster ran out from a hut and across the road. The soldier shot at him, but missed. Then the line and ran after the rooster.

"Halt!" shouted Hamilton.

The soldier stopped and turned back to the rooster and turned back to the rooster.

"Break a rooster's neck!" he said.

The soldier was not easily daunted, but he did not shoot the rooster at the feet of the general, he said.

"There now! I taught you to do it!"

At which the column roared with laughter, and even the general himself and the soldier got only two days imprisonment.

"Love it?"

"Why?"

"Because it makes the world go round!"

It's easy to grow plants in a Sunshine-heated home

Pure, Warm Sunshine Air

PEOPLE living in homes heated with ordinary furnaces often claim they cannot grow plants with any degree of success. This is due to the fact that ordinary furnaces are not provided with an automatic device to regulate the air passing through them. There is nothing to prevent cold air, which is deadly to plant life, being forced up through the registers.

Now, when the gas in the combustion chamber of the Sunshine reaches a certain point it may open the Automatic Gas Valve and if there is no chance for it to escape through the registers. Instead, the air passes through the Sunshine, which has been heated by the sun, with the proper degree of moisture from the water-pump. It's the kind of air that makes plants thrive and is good to breath into your own lungs.

If you want to guard your home (and who doesn't) against evaporation, deadly coal gas order our agent to install the Sunshine furnace (guaranteed) in your cellar.
